About the Old National Bank Mid-North Promise Program

Putting Educational and Career Goals in Reach

The mission of the Old National Bank Mid-North Promise Program (MNPP) is to empower parents and their children to reach their educational and career goals by creating individualized family learning plans, removing barriers, and connecting families to community resources.

The Children’s Museum of Indianapolis launched MNPP in October 2015 to help meet families where they are in their journey. We all have a unique life path. That’s where MNPP steps in. Whether it’s connecting you to community resource partners, helping you set goals, or offering college readiness programming—we’re here to help navigate the journey with you.

MNPP Success Story

Meet Tabitha Cowan

Tabitha Cowan, who lives in the Historic Watson Park neighborhood, joined MNPP in 2015. She was motivated to become part of the program to make and reach new goals that included owning her own business. By working with MNPP’s Family Learning Navigator (Navigator) and attending program workshops, Tabitha says she is better equipped to manage her personal and business finances. The Navigator also introduced her to volunteer opportunities in her community and, as a result, Tabitha became more involved in the neighborhood where she lives. Community building helped her grow a client base and today her business, Nails by Tabitha, is thriving. She credits MNPP for much of her success.

Here’s How the Program Works

First, you will meet with a Family Learning Navigator who will work with you to identify your family’s needs. Together you’ll create a customized Family Learning Plan. Your Family Learning Plan will outline specific educational, career, and family goals, plus the steps necessary to reach them.

Families attend monthly workshops on topics ranging from budgeting and financial management to health and wellness.

Participants can also qualify for the program’s college and career certification scholarships totaling up to $2,500 annually and renewable for up to four years.

Welcome to the Old National Bank Mid-North Promise Program

On the road to life, there are many directions one can go. It can be difficult to navigate through all the phases of growing up and raising a family.

That’s why The Children’s Museum developed the Old National Bank Mid-North Promise Program—to fulfill the museum’s promise to help the Mid-North neighborhoods by supporting children and families in their goals to improve education and career opportunities.

The Mid-North Promise Program supports both children and parents by fostering educational achievement, family-enriching activities, and better health and wellness while connecting families to helpful resources needed along the way.

“MNPP has helped me stay on track and focus on going to college and setting my sights high.”
— Capryah Clark

“It feels great to be part of the MNPP at The Children’s Museum. The workshops are very helpful and informative. It helped me keep my focus on what is most important to me—the upbringing and well-being of my kids. It made me value all I have and make goals for what I could achieve. MNPP has helped me stay on track of short-term goals and plan for long-term goals. The Navigators are amazing and wonderful people. I wish the best for them and the program. I have received all the wonderful ideas and guidance from them and the program. I am hopeful to keep having new goals for my kids and myself.”
— Anshu Mehra

The Old National Bank Mid-North Promise Program is made possible through lead gift support from Old National Bank, with major support from the Lumina Foundation, Nina Mason Pulliam Charitable Trust, The Children’s Museum Guild, and generous individual donors Jane and Steve Marmon, the Katz Family Foundation, The Brougher Family Foundation, Mike and Kristin Sherman, Robert and Toni Bader Charitable Foundation, Jim and Gwen Fountain, Susan and Jim Naus, Bob and Kathi Postlethwait, the Sterrett Family Foundation, and Mary Ann and Gene Zink.
